

Power companies dump energy

Overview

WASHINGTON— Six of the nation's largest utility corporations netted more than $10 billion in profits while disconnecting their customers' power at least 662,000 times last year — including hundreds of thousands of record-heat summertime shutoffs, according to a report released today. Washington — The Trump administration and a bipartisan group of governors called for reforms in the largest electric grid in the country to make sure the development of new artificial intelligence plants doesn't drive up electric costs. Over the past two decades, California has become a juggernaut of solar energy production.
